

The Honorable Brian Mast
U.S. House of Representatives
2182 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Mast,

The Jupiter Inlet Lighthouse has stood as a beacon in our community for generations, representing both our history and our connection to the natural landscape.

I recently heard discussions in the media about the potential sale of federally managed land and buildings. I worry about what this might mean for the Jupiter Inlet Lighthouse and the public's ability to visit, for students to learn from it, and for the site's long-term preservation. If ownership changes or the federal office closes, will the lighthouse still be protected? Will it remain a place for education and public access, or will it become something else entirely?

Jupiter has grown and changed over the years, but the lighthouse has always been a constant — a symbol of our shared history. I hope it stays that way.

Thank you for your time and for considering the importance of preserving this treasured place for future generations.

Sincerely,
